

Tuesday 2nd June

WALT carry out a research project about a country of your choice

Success Criteria

collect and record information

Task 1

Today we would like you to research the food from your country and even have a go and making a dish from your chosen country.

You will need to think about the crops, fruits and vegetables that are grown in that country.

You will need to name and describe 2-3 national dishes.

Example

The main products of Brazil are cattle, coffee, cotton, corn, rice, soy, wheat, sugarcane, tobacco, beans, flowers and fruit.

There are a many different vegetables that grows there: several kinds of pumpkins, potatoes, eggplant, beets, onion, garlic, carrots, peas, ginger, gherkin, yucca, cassava, pepper, corn, okra, cucumber, tomatoes, beans, beans and cabbage.

Brazil has so many fruits!

The most common fruits are mangoes, papayas, pineapples, grapes, oranges and bananas, but certain fruits can only be found at specific places or during certain seasons.

Feijoada.

The name stems from the word feijão (bean), the key ingredient of feijoada - which is essentially a bean stew mixed with beef and pork.

Brigadeiro

Brigadeiro is balls of truffles made with condensed milk and covered in chocolate sprinkles. The traditional brigadeiro is milk chocolate, yet there are also white chocolate versions available, too. They can get even more delicious when made with a whole strawberry in the middle.

Açaí

Super-food açaí is traditional in Brazil, especially in coastal cities where it is a common post-beach snack. It can be plain as sorbet, or with banana, strawberry or granola to be added in. Açaí can also be found as a smoothie, a juice, in powder or even added into a main meal using its raw, berry form.

