On Friday 8th May was bank holiday which acknowledged the 75th anniversary of VE Day (victory for Europe Day) which marks the end of the Second World War.

Exciting stuff! Did you watch the Queen address the nation? What can you remember about it? Did you manage to leave a message for the veterans?

Last Friday was also the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Day. We hope you had the chance to join in with the beat.

English: This week we will be moving on from Michael Rosen and embark upon a messy adventure with Jan and Jerry Oke authors of the 'Naughty Bus', how exciting! We will start the week off by thinking and writing about the illustration and title before the adventures of the Naughty Bus.

Maths: This week we will be looking at 'odd and even', as the children have now completed 'halving and doubling' we look deeper into why not all numbers can be halved equally. The following week beginning 18th May, we will look at 'Patterns'.

Reading: Please continue to encourage children to use their phonics skills to read as many words as they can and encourage them to follow along with the story before answering related questions.

We hope you are practising and enjoying D.E.A.R time (Drop Everything And Read) at home. Get your household involved and share a picture with us on ILD.

Padlet: Our 'I can see' page will now only consist of a link and instruction to visit our Padlet wall to see the picture of the day. This way we can see each other's idea on what can be seen in each picture. You can write your sentences as before and upload it to Padlet or comment directly under the picture using your keyboard.
